

NEW FACES OF JASON

Larry Klein
OEM Product Specialist

Larry Klein has joined the Jason Industrial team and will be working closely with Jeff Pence as OEM Product Specialist, responsible for OEM activity in the Eastern United States.

Larry will be working out of Dallas, Georgia, a suburb of Atlanta, residing there with his wife Cheryl and their 16-year-old son Jamie.

Larry comes to us with over 20 years of Industrial hose, belt, and drive component experience. From 1990 to 2006, Larry was with Pirelli, who was then acquired by Dayco, later acquired by Carlisle. Larry's last post was with Tucker Rocky, where he sold aftermarket drive components to the power sports industry (Motorcycle/ATV/ UTV).

Mark Davis has joined Jason Industrial this month as District Sales Manager, assuming the responsibility for Sales Territory 1009, consisting of Florida and Southern Georgia.

T.J. Tennesen is expecting her first child in the middle of May and has decided to return to Inside Sales following her upcoming maternity leave. T.J. has done a commendable job in handling the Outside Sales function, representing Jason Industrial and leveraging the Tampa branch's capability throughout the region.

A 1985 Graduate of Georgia Tech, Davis has a degree in Industrial Engineering. From that point until 2009, Mark worked for Goodyear Engineered Products in various sales and marketing assignments. From 2004-2009, he was the Goodyear Account Executive managing and coordinating sales and marketing activities on behalf of Applied Industrial Technologies. He also spent the past two years as a General Manager for AIT in Orlando, Florida. Some of his higher profile accounts included the Kennedy Space Center and Lockheed Martin.

Mark resides in the Orlando area with his wife Jeanan and twin daughters Savannah and Adeline.

We welcome Mark and wish T.J. the best of health to both she and her new baby girl.
